NEP 2020 Perspective Educator's Emotional Intelligence

Dr. Darshana Vithalani
Management Department,
Faculty of Business and Commerce

Introduction:
Teaching and learning are both immersed in emotions. Every learning in life comes from its very experience and the kind of reflection and emotions one carries to those sets of experiences. Emotional intelligence is an ability and skill that makes one aware of oneself, their beliefs and approach toward life, and their ability to navigate through it without being trapped. Emotional intelligence is meant to harness Self-awareness and be conscious of our thoughts, behavior, and way of living. It has been one of the most important yet missing link of contemporary education. With the amidst of New Education Policy, 2020 and guidelines by OCED and WHO, it is now incorporated among 10 most important future skills for professional and personal growth.

The classroom represents a very complex social context where teachers and students continually interact with and respond to each other's behaviors. Therefore, understanding educator's own emotional intelligence is crucial in preparing them to indulge in facilitating emotional intelligence in the students for their holistic development and well-being.

Objective:
To gain insight into the significance of incorporating Socio-Emotional Learning (SEL) into higher education.
To recognize that over two-thirds of the competencies contributing to individuals' success are rooted in Emotional Intelligence (EI) skills.
